AT EMPEROR'S 80TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Hino reaffirms Japan ties with CNMI

Japan Consul Koji Hino reassured the CNMI that the country's ties with its former colony remains strong even as visitor arrivals from Japan have shrunk the past several years.

"Unfortunately, numbers of Japanese tourists have significantly decreased since Japan Airlines stopped its regular flights to Saipan. However, considering our long history of friendly relations, we should not let our ties weaken. I personally have confidence that we can continue to strengthen our ties in the future given the physical closeness of our islands," he said Tuesday night during the Japan Consular Office's reception for Emperor Akihito's 80th birthday celebration at the Hafadai Beach Hotel.

Hino said there remains a soft spot for the islands among the Japanese people. "Saipan is not as commercially developed as Guam and Hawaii but what attracts many foreign visitors and Japanese people who live here is the friendliness of the local people and the natural beauty and peacefulness of Saipan. Since I started working here, I have attended many peace memorial services held by various kinds of Japanese organizations to pay tribute to and mourn the war dead. However, many young Japanese tourists don't know that war was fought here and many lost their lives. They just consider Saipan as a place to visit and enjoy."

2005 imperial visit

Hino recalled the imperial couple's visit to the CNMI eight years ago.

"As you may recall, in the year 2005 Their Majesties visited Saipan on their own request to pay tribute to the war dead and to pray for world peace. I wish to thank you for the warm hospitality extended to them during their stay here. Before coming to Saipan in 2005 His Majesty the Emperor remarked: 'It is our hope that as we walk onwards, all of us always keep in mind that Japan today is founded on the sacrifices of these many people.'"

Gov. Eloy S. Inos also recalled the imperial visit during his turn on the podium.

"Eight years later, the CNMI is still so grateful and indebted for the historic visit by Emperor Akihito and his wife, Empress Michiko, to Saipan on June 27 and 28, 2005. Today, as governor, I am truly pleased to once again convey the highest appreciation of the government and people of the CNMI to the imperial family for choosing to come here to pay tribute to the casualties of World War II."

Inos said the couple's visit was historic as it marked the first ever journey outside Japan by members of the imperial family to pray for the war dead.

"It was also the first time the Emperor paid tribute at a monument specifically dedicated to Koreans killed in World War II," he added.

He wished Emperor Akihito a joyous 80th birthday. "This is an honorable celebration for an honorable and truly respected imperial leader. I join the people of the CNMI in wishing Emperor Akihito the best of health and greater success for many years to come!"

Resolution

The CNMI Legislature presented Hino and the Consular Office of Japan on Saipan with a resolution thanking Japan for its many contributions to the CNMI.

Just before cocktails, Hino invited Inos, Lt. Gov. Jude U. Hoffschneider, Senate President Ralph Torres, and Saipan Mayor Donald Flores to help crack open a barrel of Japanese sake.

It was no ordinary sake either. Hino said the Japanese sake they will be enjoying that evening is "kitaya," which was recently declared the champion sake at an international wine competition this year and was shipped especially from Japan for this occasion.

Emperor Akihito was born on Dec. 23, 1933.

CNMI tax amnesty now in effect up to Jan. 1, 2014

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

For only the third time in CNMI history, taxpayers with delinquent returns can now settle their taxes without having to pay penalties and interests following Gov. Eloy S. Inos' signing yesterday of a tax amnesty law that will be in effect until Jan. 1, 2014.

Unlike the two previous tax amnesty laws, this one will run for only a month.

Rep. Tony Sablan (Ind-Saipan), author of the tax amnesty bill, reiterated yesterday that this is one of the most effective ways to generate additional revenue during these difficult times and "without raising taxes," rather than losing out on both the back taxes and penalties.

Sablan, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the government's obligations are "piling up" and the Legislature has to continue looking for ways to generate new and additional revenues.

He cited, for example, the anticipated steep increases in government health insurance premiums as early as Jan. 1, 2014, which was among the main issues in Tuesday's leadership meeting between the governor and lawmakers.

"If people owe taxes, they can now come forward and settle those back taxes with Finance's Revenue and Tax, work out a payment plan, and their penalties and interests will be waived. This would help generate additional revenues we badly need," Sablan told Saipan Tribune.

» Waiver of penalties, interests for those willing to settle back taxes

Sablan's House Bill 18-28, House Draft 1, Senate Draft 1 is now Public Law 18-29.

The former CNMI immigration director reiterated that this is not "tax forgiveness," but only a waiver of penalties and interests for those who want to finally come forward and pay what they owe the government in taxes.

"I hope that the circumstances have changed, so that those businesses, for example, that closed down because of back taxes, would be willing to settle their delinquent returns and reopen their businesses. In that way, they get another chance to run their business and help the economy further," he added.

The CNMI government provided tax amnesty programs in 2001 and 2005 through Public Laws 12-51 and 14-28, respectively, in an effort to collect outstanding tax revenues.

Under a tax amnesty program, penalties and interests on unpaid or unreported taxes are waived. It allows taxpayers to voluntarily come forward and take action to comply with tax laws.

The tax amnesty does not apply to the following: persons against whom a criminal or civil action has been initiated and is pending for any violation of CNMI tax laws or any person being investigated for fraud; any person who has been convicted of tax fraud; any person whose source of income is illegal; or any person who fraudulently files a special return under this new law.

Taxpayers who already received amnesty under Public Laws 12-51 or 14-28 are no longer eligible for tax amnesty under P.L. 18-29.

The new tax amnesty program is effective upon its Dec. 4 signing into law and until Jan. 1, 2014. It expires on Jan. 2, 2014.

The Finance secretary is authorized to promulgate rules and regulations to administer this new statute.

Covered under the proposal are all taxes, including withholding taxes and all returns, including deductions, exemptions, and credits erroneously claimed in returns filed for all tax years prior to calendar year 2013.

These include taxes for wages, salary or earnings; gross revenue tax; room, bar and jackpot tax; excise tax; and income and/or tax pursuant to NMTIT.

Tax amnesty, according to the Ways and Means Committee that reviewed and recommended passage of the bill, usually results in accelerated collection of overdue tax revenues to the government, although the program's primary goal is to bring taxpayers back into compliance, thus strengthening future revenue collection.

Another revenue-generating bill that has yet to find its way to the governor's desk is an electronic gaming legislation that the Senate will take up at its next session. This comes after the Senate essentially killed anew a House bill legalizing casinos on Saipan. Video lottery has also become legal but the government has yet to issue a request for proposals for its operations.

With the demise of the garment industry, the CNMI now only has one industry—tourism.

lands' huge challenges.

One by one, presidents and governors shared their concerns about climate change and other island challenges.

"Hopefully, the industrialized nations would help soon and help fund the islands' adaptation to climate change, before we all sink to the bottom of the ocean," Yap Gov. Sebastian L. Anefal told Saipan Tribune.

Marshall Islands President Christopher J. Loek turned over the chairmanship of the MCES to CNMI Gov. Eloy S. Inos, who officially called the summit to order at 2:01pm at Fiesta Resort & Spa.

The summit, which wraps up tomorrow, tackles the region's common concerns and solutions, including climate change, tourism, healthcare, shark conservation, and human trafficking.

In his remarks, Inos said this year's theme, "With the Sea, We are One," suggests Micronesia's common values and principles.

Like the other Micronesia leaders, Inos vowed support for the Guam governor as he takes part in the climate change task force that President Barack Obama formed.

Yap's Sebastian said they have started seeing coastal erosion, disappearing atolls, seepage of saltwater into taro patches, and coral bleaching. He said people have started relocating to the main island in the past 10 years because of rising sea level. He said some Yap atolls are only 10 to 11 feet above sea level.

"We want the industrial world to correct the problems that they have created because this has impacted us, we're innocent bystanders. We're not really contributing so much to the depletion of the ozone layer. It's the industrialized worlds in my view who are causing all these problems and unfortunately we are the victims," he said.

One of the major challenges is the islands' lack of resources to deal with climate change.

"If it takes money to correct some of the problems so be it, but they provide the funding. Now there's all kinds of funding they talk about but it's very hard to access such funding," said Anefal, the longest member of the MCES.

Palau President Tommy Remengesau Jr. said Calvo's appointment to the climate change task force, along with that of the Hawaii governor, will be critical in moving the islands' climate change agenda forward.

"Now is the time for the United States to take a strong stand on climate change and to begin the process of funding adaptation...I strongly believe that the MCES is still a viable vehicle for the leaders of our region to develop a Micronesian voice, not only in our Pacific region but in the larger international arena," he said.

Calvo said he will bring to the task force the pertinent information from Micronesia on climate change.

He said Micronesian communities are the least contributors to climate change yet they bear the brunt of these changes—"whether it's drought, heavy precipitation, rising of seas, warming of seas."

"We're hopeful the federal government understands what it means to the quality of life to our people," he added.

Federated States of Micronesia President Emanuel Mori, in his remarks, suggested that instead of having 13 different issues, the summit should "prioritize" at least three major ones to see better progress.

The other chief executives agreed, and they cited almost the same issues—environment/climate change and tourism/economic development.

Also at the summit were Pohnpei Gov. John Ehsa, Chuuk Attorney General Sabino Asor representing Gov. Johnson S.

Elimo, and Kosrae Lt. Gov. Carson Sigrah.

Hundreds of delegates from different Micronesian islands joined those from the CNMI at the summit, which also saw the participation of U.S. agencies and private entities.

investigating the alleged use of government resources in the circulation of the NMD Corp. petition.

Among the allegations is the faxing of a copy of the petition sent from the Office of Personnel Management and faxed during office hours.

NMD Corp.'s Danny Quitugua and Alvaro Santos, in an interview yesterday, said the CNMI provisions in both S. 744 and H.R. 15 provide a shortcut to permanent residency to aliens in the CNMI and will automatically deprive U.S. citizens—especially indigenous groups—of some 12,000 jobs that aliens will cling to once they apply for and are granted permanent residency or "green card."

"Once they are granted permanent residency, they will cling to their jobs, and that will deprive U.S. citizens those jobs they hold. Then there's political ramifications," Santos told Saipan Tribune.

Under the CNMI-specific provisions in S. 744 and H.R. 15, there is no automatic and mass grant of permanent residency. Aliens have to "apply" for it.

Only those who have been legally in the CNMI since at least May 2003, which is 10 years ago, can apply for permanent residency five years after the bill is signed into law.

Quitugua and Santos said there's only 12,000 "local population," and once 12,000 or more are granted "green card," then that would "further marginalize" the indigenous Chamorros and Carolinians in the CNMI.

Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (Ind-MP) earlier said the "12,000 to 14,000" that the NMD Corp. is claiming is "too high."

Sablan made sure that a CNMI provision is included in both U.S. Senate and U.S. House immigration reform bills.

Quitugua said they will be gathering signatures for the petition until Dec. 15.

"If Congress of the United States accedes to the inclusion of the CNMI in their comprehensive immigration reforms in both S. 744 and HR 15, it will be aiding and abetting in the total irreparable destruction of our 'Living History,' the speedy demise of our unique cultural and traditional identity and integrity as indigenous Chamorro and Carolinian people of [Northern Marianas descent], and the complete and permanent overthrow of our political control of our self-government in our cultural homeland," the petition reads.

The petition also says that such action by Congress will result in "direct and willful violation and contravention of our fundamental right to local self-government that was agreed upon and guaranteed under Article 1, Section 103 of the Covenant."

Sablan and Gov. Eloy S. Inos separately said earlier that the CNMI provision in S. 744 and HR 15 does not violate the Covenant between the U.S. and the Northern Marianas.

"If it violates the Covenant, then Public Law 110-229 will be ruled as void and it's not. So if they have issues, don't blame Kilili. If you have anything to blame, blame history, the history where 78 percent of the people approved the Covenant in a plebiscite," Sablan said.

He said the issue of immigration "was settled in 1975 when the people approved the Covenant."

The NMD Corp. said that, unlike the continental United States, the CNMI is not a nation of immigrants but an island community of small homogeneous ethnicity, culturally rooted in traditional heritage.

The group also said the Chamorros and Carolinians "may be in imminent danger of becoming extinct as indigenous peoples of the CNMI."

They added that the CNMI-specific provision "was made without consultation" and "against" the consent of indigenous Chamorros and Carolinians.

"We hereby respectfully appeal to members of the Senate and House in the Congress of the United States to reject and disapprove any inclusion of the CNMI in S. 744 and H.R. 15, or any subsequent U.S. immigration legislation attempting to grant improved immigration status to foreign aliens in the CNMI with pathway to citizenship," the petitioners say.

They added that the indigenous Chamorros and Carolinians "fully support the cutoff date," referring to the end of the transitional period on Dec. 31, 2014, when alien workers need to exit the CNMI.

The CNMI government, business community and other sectors, however, have been asking for an extension of the CW worker program beyond 2014 because there is still not enough U.S. workers to fill the jobs held by foreign workers, who are mostly from Asia.

This NMD Corp. petition addressed to Congress is separate from another petition it addressed to CNMI lawmakers, asking them to introduce a joint resolution to also oppose the CNMI provision in S. 744 and H.R. 15.

The previous petition gathered 2,523 signatures, Quitugua said. These include 2,054 signatures from Saipan, 261 from Rota, and 208 from Tinian.

This also comes after the CNMI House adopted Rep. Felicidad Ogomoro's (R-Saipan) House resolution asking Congress to eliminate the CNMI provision in national immigration reform bills.

Nonresident workers, who comprise the majority of the CNMI's workforce, are expected to leave the Commonwealth by the end of 2014, when the transition period to federal immigration ends.

Longanecker is on island for the Micronesian Executive Summit, along with Dennis Mohatt, WICHE vice president for behavioral health. The two are slated to make presentations about the organization and how member-institutions in the Pacific will benefit from WICHE's programs and initiatives.

"[The] CNMI, compared to most of the U.S. states, ranks relatively low [in terms of having an educated community]. Most of the people here with baccalaureate degrees came from other places and they're not CNMI citizens. You'll have to find a way to replace [the foreign workers]...and that's a huge challenge," Longanecker said during yesterday's news briefing at the Northern Marianas College.

The CNMI became a WICHE member in November last year, allowing CNMI students pursuing college in WICHE member institutions to avail of discounted rates for their tuition and fees. This is in addition to accessing various online courses and programs.

Because the CNMI's membership is relatively new, Longanecker could not immediately specify the number of CNMI students currently availing of WICHE programs. Member-institutions' reports, he said, are not due until next year.

WICHE is a regional organization that works to improve access to higher education. At present it has 16 member institutions including Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, and the CNMI—the newest participant and the first from the Pacific Islands.

Each year, the CNMI must pay a membership fee of $131,000 for its students to avail of WICHE programs and benefits. This annual due is being shouldered solely by the CNMI until other Pacific areas join in the initiative.

Longanecker described the discounted rates given to NMI students as "advantage tuition." For graduate students, for instance, WICHE's Western Regional Graduate Program enables students to enroll in more than 250 graduate programs and pay the resident tuition rate instead of the nonresident rate that an out-of-state student would normally pay.

"As we look at the CNMI, with its immigration issues, you've got to do something because...the CNMI has a very limited resources, so I believe this partnership will give this island the capacity [to build its own professional workforce]," said Longanecker.

While on island, Longanecker said it is their objective to convince and entice other Pacific leaders to come together to what he called a "win-win" program for everyone. His team is set to meet with various Micronesian chief executives this week.

According to NMC president Dr. Sharon Y. Hart, WICHE membership gives CNMI students "endless educational opportunities" for them to grow and succeed.

"NMC cannot be everything to everyone. We don't have the resources to really expand and open more doors for our students," she said, adding that participation in WICHE programs will greatly help develop much-needed professionals for the CNMI.

She cited as example the extreme lack of dental hygienists in the Commonwealth, a career that can easily be developed with the help of WICHE programs.

"We're trying to target markets where the CNMI has a shortfall," she said.

Hart said the CNMI government must be concerned about the potential loss of its own workforce. She believes that islands and countries with the most educated people have the best economies.

Meanwhile, despite the financial constraints of the local government, Lt. Gov. Jude Hofscheider reiterated yesterday the administration's commitment to continue and strengthen the CNMI's partnership with WICHE.

"It's a challenge [to meet the dues] but nevertheless, the CNMI commitment is there," he said, adding that Inos administration will closely work with NMC to sustain this partnership with WICHE.

WICHE, according to Longanecker, has been around for 60 years and presently has 32,000 undergraduate students in its programs. Its graduate students attend about 220 institutions in the West, among others.

Ex-convict Palacios found guilty of all charges

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A federal court jury on Saipan has found Guam ex-convict Jesus S. Palacios guilty of charges related to possession of two guns and 27 bullets.

After deliberating for a few hours, the 12 jurors reached a unanimous verdict yesterday, finding the 52-year-old Palacios guilty of all charges—three counts of a felon in possession of firearm and/or ammunition and three counts of unlawful use of a controlled substance in possession of firearm and/or ammunition.

Palacios will be sentenced on March 14, 2014 at 9am.

U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona ordered the U.S. Probation Office to prepare a presentence investigation report.

After the hearing, as a court marshal escorted him outside the courtroom, the teary-eyed Palacios nodded to some family members and friends who watched the proceeding.

The trial began Tuesday.

Assistant U.S. attorneys Rami Badawy and Ross Naughton on Tuesday called six witnesses: the defendant's wife, Yahong Li Palacios; Department of Public Safety police officer Rudolph C. Sablan, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives special agent John N. Quintanilla, ATF firearm and toolmark examiner Howard H. Hong, ATF fingerprint specialist Tania Kapila, and Drug Enforcement Administration forensic chemist Melanie A. Silver.

The prosecution rested its case after Silver's testimony.

Court-appointed counsel Mark Scoggins did not call any witness. The jurors started deliberations before noon yesterday.

The indictment arose from an incident in April 2013 when police arrested Palacios for allegedly beating up his wife in front of their child and pointing a gun at her head when she refused to give him money.

The then 4-year-old boy told police that he witnessed the beating of his mother and that he also saw his father smoke "ice" and has four guns.

Police learned that Palacios was arrested in Guam in 1997 and charged with murder, manslaughter, and possession of a gun without an ID. He pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

In 1996, Palacios was also arrested in Guam and he subsequently pleaded guilty to aggravated assault. The other charges were dismissed.

According to the latest indictment, Palacios, a convicted felon, was found in possession of one Ruger Model 10/22 .38 caliber rifle and one .22 caliber rifle with its barrel and stock sawed off (serial number removed).

Palacios was also found in possession of nine .22 caliber bullets, 10 Winchester 38SPL .38 caliber bullets, and eight .9 mm caliber bullets.

Christmas in the Marianas kicks off this Saturday »Unveiling of 30-foot Christmas tree starts monthlong celebration

RNV Construction and Kinpachi Restaurant employees pose in front of the 30-foot Christmas Tree that will be unveiled this Saturday as the monthlong 2013 Christmas in the Marianas campaign starts at the Paseo de Marianas.

The 2013 Christmas in the Marianas celebration starts this Saturday with the lighting up of the giant Christmas tree at the center of the Paseo de Marianas in Garapan.

It marks the eighth year in a row that RNV Construction and its hardworking staff put up the 30-foot symbol of Christmas.

According to Sonia Siwa, spokesperson for PDM Promoters, Inc., the mammoth Christmas tree took three months to build and is made of recycled cans and plastic bottles.

In addition to the lighting ceremony, the judging for the 8th Annual Christmas Tree Decoration Contest starts this Saturday.

Siwa said that 14 schools signed up for the competition: San Antonio, Kagman, Tanapag, William S. Reyes, Oleai, Dandan, Gregorio T. Camacho, San Vicente, and Koblerville elementary schools; Green Meadow School, Golden Harvest International School, Grace Christian Academy, Mt. Carmel School, and Agape Christian School.

Two groups—Commonwealth Cancer Association led by Juan L. Babauta and the Girls Scout of the Northern Mariana Islands led by Laila Y. Boyer—will also participate but not compete in the Christmas tree decoration contest.

"They want to be a part of our Christmas event and will also decorate their Christmas tree," she said.

Last year, San Antonio successfully defended its championship in the 7th Annual Christmas Tree Decoration Contest.

The annual competition aims to promote the importance of recycling by encouraging elementary students to use empty soda cans, water bottles, used paper, and other recyclable materials to decorate 9-foot tall Christmas trees along Paseo de Marianas.

Like previous years, the judging of entries for the Christmas tree decorating contest will coincide with the kickoff of the monthlong Christmas in the Marianas activities to be hosted by "Friends of Paseo de Marianas," a group composed of PDM Promoters, Marianas Visitors Authority, and Pacific Development Inc.

The 2013 Christmas in the Marianas celebration will also have a Christmas Caroling Competition on Dec. 14 at the Paso de Marianas and a Parade of Floats on Dec. 21. The latter will be held along the stretch of Beach Road from the Carolinian Affairs Office to the American Memorial Park.

This year's Christmas in the Marianas culminates with the annual Mochitsuki Festival on Dec. 28. Organized in collaboration with the Japanese Society, the festival marks the season's preparation of mocha—a dough-like substance of glutinous rice—for the Japanese New Year.

PDM Promoters, Inc. is a non-profit corporation that aims to make the Paseo de Marianas and the Garapan vicinity a safe and clean place for tourists and residents alike.

'Prosecuting defaulted govt scholars is long overdue'

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The decision to run after non-responsive government scholars is long overdue, according to Lt. Governor Jude Hofschneider, who praised yesterday the move recently taken by the CNMI Scholarship Office and its advisory board.

Without citing numbers, Hofschneider described as "substantial" the amount owed the government by the defaulted scholars who failed to return to the CNMI to fulfill the conditions set in the agreement they signed with the scholarship agency.

"When the recipients signed off on the agreement, they understood what they are obligated to do. Part of this agreement is they are required to come back and serve the community. If they are challenged by not landing a decent job here, it doesn't mean that they don't have to pay anymore. I think it [prosecuting this matter] should have been initiated way back," he said after yesterday's press conference at the Northern Marianas College.

Scholarship administrator Rose Pangelinan earlier said that these defaulted scholars owe the government a significant amount. Over the years, these scholars failed to respond to the government's pleas to come and work with the scholarship agency for assistance and guidance. This resulted in the decision to refer their cases to the Office of the Attorney General for legal proceedings.

Saipan Tribune learned that all agreements made between CNMI Scholarship Office and recipients are legally binding. If a recipient is in default of the conditions of their memorandum of agreement, he or she is required to repay the total amount they received.

Hofschneider

For example, of the more than 100 scholars of the CNMI Scholarship Office who potentially graduated last school year, only a few have actually notified the government about the completion of their studies, violating the agreement they signed with the CNMI Scholarship Office.

Collection from fiscal year 2013 alone was also low at only $55,367.

Hofschneider said the Inos administration will continue to work with the Scholarship Office to find ways on how the government can assist the recipients, even if they are in default. However, he pointed out that the government needs to also act on how it could recover the "loss" incurred by the program.

He admitted that the government continues to find it hard to entice the islands' scholars to return and work for the CNMI. He said the CNMI's lack of available jobs is what hinders these scholars from returning home.

CNMI scholars, upon receiving their checks, sign a memorandum of agreement that requires the scholar to notify the CNMI Scholarship Office within 90 days once they graduate or fail to enroll.

Saipan Tribune learned that if they fail to do this, these scholars will be in default and all the funds they received from the scholarship program will become a loan that they must pay back.

Beneficiaries are also required to return to the CNMI and work here after college graduation. It was also learned that if a defaulted scholar has no job or can't find one to repay the "loan," a deferment can be worked out with the Scholarship Office if they wish to.

Reyes named MPLT administrator

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Marianas Public Land Trust board of trustees has approved the appointment of one of its long-time staffers to serve as the agency's new administrator.

MPLT board chair Pedro Deleon Guerrero and the agency's consultant, Bruce MacMillan, confirmed with Saipan Tribune yesterday the appointment of Bobbie Reyes to the position.

Deleon Guerrero disclosed that Reyes is the agency's long-time office manager. Her appointment was made after undergoing thorough review of her performance.

Deleon Guerrero said the board made the decision during one of its October meetings where Reyes' performance evaluation was discussed in an executive session.

"Based on the result of the annual performance evaluation, [Reyes] received a very high rating that prompted the board to go ahead and approve her promotion," the chairman said yesterday, adding that everyone is fully satisfied with how the former program manager managed to fulfill all her tasks and additional work.

With her promotion also comes a corresponding merit increase in her salary. Her new contract is valid for three years.

MPLT, it was learned, has only two staffers, including the office manager.

According to MacMillan, Reyes promotion to the administrator position was purely based on merit. The office manager position, he said, was eliminated, giving way to the creation of the administrator position.

MPLT is a government instrumentality tasked to handle and manage public land lease revenue, which it invests for government appropriation. The agency is run by a governing board.

Settlement reached in Taylor's lawsuit vs Buckingham, OAG

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
REPORTER

The parties in the age discrimination lawsuit filed by former CNMI government lawyer James William Taylor against former attorney general Edward T. Buckingham and the Office of the Attorney General have reached a settlement.

Taylor's lawyer, Robert T. Torres, and assistant attorney general Reena Patel, representing the CNMI government, agreed Tuesday to ask the court to dismiss the lawsuit in its entirety and with finality.

Torres and Patel said their stipulation is made as the settlement between the parties on all claims and issues was achieved.

The lawyers said the U.S. District Court for the NMI shall, however, retain jurisdiction over the case to ensure that the settlement terms will be enforced.

Each party will bear its own attorney's fees and costs.

The terms and conditions of the settlement were not disclosed.

Last August, U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge Joaquin V.E. Manibusan said the parties and their lawyers in Taylor's lawsuit met him for a settlement conference and that a settlement between the parties was achieved.

Taylor, a retired U.S. Air Force officer and a citizen of the state of Washington, sued Buckingham, the CNMI government, and the Office of the Attorney General.

Taylor alleged that Buckingham fired him in 2011 without following proper procedures to save on cost and in retaliation for his advice against the approval of some sole-source contracts.

In his reply to the lawsuit, Buckingham asserted, among other things, that Taylor's claims are barred, in whole or in part, because they were not timely filed.

The Office of the Attorney General had filed a motion to dismiss the claims. Patel asserted, among other things, that Taylor had not stated sufficient facts to support his Age Discrimination in Employment Act claim as his complaint alleges that cost savings, rather than age, motivated the alleged adverse action.

The public can review these filings on CUC's website under the "Announcement" tab. A two hour period [2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.] on December 9 will be reserved for public comments. The amended petition is being reviewed by the Commission's independent regulatory consultant [Georgetown Consulting Group] who will submit its position on the need and "just and reasonableness" of CUC's rate and related requests at the public hearings.

The Commission will also review at the public hearings the status of: a) CUC's accounts receivable; b) the $1.02 million dollars in annual revenue, which it awarded CUC by Decision dated June 7, 2011 to fund obligations under a $10 million dollar loan with Independence Bank, which never closed; and c) CUC's compliance with the requirements of Public Law 15-87 regarding the establishment of a net metering program.

Jury deliberation starts in Monkeya trial

REPORTER

Jurors began deliberations last night in the ongoing trial of Melvin Ilo Monkeya, a former Tinian police officer accused of sexually abusing a then-14-year-old girl inside the Tinian police station in 2008.

Saipan Tribune learned that the jurors started deliberations at 6pm. When they failed to reach a unanimous verdict by 7pm, they were directed to resume their deliberations at 8:15am today, Thursday. The trial is being conducted at the Superior Court Tinian.

Chief Prosecutor Shelli Neal and assistant attorney general Chemere McField yesterday called a police detective and two other alleged sexual assault victims of Monkeya.

The Office of the Attorney General has not charged Monkeya in connection with the incidents involving the two other alleged victims.

The prosecution rested its case after the testimonies of the three witnesses.

Defense attorney Jennifer Dockter then moved for a judgment of acquittal but Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho denied the motion.

Dockter then called two witnesses—Monkeya's mother and an attending physician at the Tinian Health Center.

The trial began on Monday.

Monkeya, 42, is charged with one count of sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree.

Matson, LBC ship relief supplies to PH

GUAM—Matson is partnering with the LBC Foundation in delivering donated typhoon relief goods to the Philippine Red Cross.

Matson will provide free shipping services from Hawaii and Guam to Manila, transporting container loads of relief goods donated to the LBC Foundation. The shipments will be distributed by the Philippine Red Cross to locations affected by Super Typhoon Haiyan.

He was ordered to perform 200 hours of community service, write a letter of apology to the victims, and complete anger management counseling. During the probationary period, he will not be allowed to possess or consume any alcoholic beverages.

According to the plea deal, on July 5, 2013 in San Jose, Saipan, Igisomar, while intoxicated, slapped his niece twice on the left cheek. He then walked over to another family member, slapped her, and pushed her down the floor. The family member sustained bruises as a result of the attack.

Police said Igisomar apparently got angry after he was awakened by the children's noise. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Let's stop buying and giving things that people don't want or need

By DANIEL FINK
LOS ANGELES TIMES

Some celebrate Christmas, some Hanukkah and some Kwanzaa, but to me the coming holiday time is potlatch season, and it's starting earlier every year.

A potlatch was a festival of the indigenous peoples of the Pacific Northwest during which the host distributed property and gifts as a way to demonstrate wealth, generosity and social standing. Guests would reciprocate at a later time with items that matched or exceeded the value of the original gifts, or risk being humiliated.

Although births and marriages were sometimes acknowledged at a potlatch, the main purpose was the reciprocal redistribution of wealth. The more one gave away, the greater one's power. In some tribes' celebrations, the goods were destroyed, in what might be called the ultimate act of conspicuous consumption.

In the late 1800s, Canada and the United States banned potlatch ceremonies at the urging of Christian missionaries and government agents, who saw the custom as wasteful, unproductive and contrary to civilized values. These bans were clearly discriminatory, but were also a way of assimilating the native peoples into Western traditions of displaying power by accumulating and keeping wealth rather than by giving it away. The potlatch bans were eventually repealed.

Fast-forward 125 years, and one wonders whether modern American society has adopted the potlatch traditions. As "Black Friday" morphs in one direction to interfere with the celebration of Thanksgiving and in the other toward Cyber Monday, people continue to buy one another things just because they "have to get someone a gift," even if it may be re-gifted, returned or never used. Our society's barely restrained annual celebration of blatant commercialism approaches the seemingly needless exchanges and even destructiveness of the potlatch.

Judging from news reports and holiday sales that began before kids were done trick-or-treating, retailers are very concerned that business will be down from last year. They have reason to be concerned. Aside from the shorter shopping period between Thanksgiving and Christmas, the economy is still a shambles, the economic impact of Obamacare is unclear and there are no really "must have" consumer electronics, books or toys.

Unfortunately, in these hard economic times, when jobs are still scarce, there is great need and even food insecurity, especially among younger people and families with children. But in most parts of middle- and upper-class Southern California, nobody appears to need much more than what they already have.

My wife says that if everyone thought as I do, the economy would be in even worse shape. She's probably right. The malls would be emptier and business would be down for sweatshops in China, unsafe factories in Bangladesh and makers of gift cards and wrap. But here in the Los Angeles area, cars are parked in driveways or on the

People Power to the quick

It has almost been a month since Typhoon Yolanda's (Haiyan) strong and unprecedented belch spewed over the central islands of the Philippine archipelago. Having invested presence and energy in the affected area two decades ago, I was quick to develop empathy to the aftermath's innocent suffering, but disciplined enough to distance myself emotionally from the disaster. Visibly, whatever tangible accomplishments we might have contributed before were wiped out, but I was confident that the human spirit we shared with folks stayed around longer.

It is People Power II, not in protest against the likes of a Ferdinand Marcos or a seemingly uncomfortable President Benigno Noynoy Aquino, but in the building of something new from the old, now obliterated for good. That is the unmistakable lesson we hear from friends and associates in the region who have buckled up and rolled up their sleeves to proceed with the building process.

I am reminded of the time I was a resident community worker in the village of Sudtonggan, Basak, Lapu-Lapu City on Mactan Island in Cebu Province, a project demonstration site. While my wife and I were facilitating a community replication consult at the other end of the island, our staff residence in the middle of the coral-limestone studded village burned down.

There were no fatal casualties but our two daughters, along with children of other staff members, ran out into safety practically naked since sleeping in the tropical humid atmosphere did not require pajamas or much of anything else. I recall a couple of village homes taking their children's Sunday clothes, offering them for our children's use. I lost two items of commercial value: an Italian hand-made pair of comfortable loafers, and an old Cartier watch, gifts from a previous lifestyle.

What a liberating incident the conflagration was, for not only did I no longer had to worry about the meager wealth I owned, I was also a grateful recipient of the care and compassion of those I had come to serve and labor with. Suddenly our roles were reversed. It was at once a humbling and freedom-boosting occasion.

Something of this nature occupied my mind as I got news from colleagues across the Visayas, and as reports from the devastated areas began to filter out into the world's press. I have grown rather confident through the years in the resiliency of the world-wise street-smart Pinoy with whom I identify with, along with many Filipinos in diaspora around the world from whose ranks some emerged, and I was seeing the traits of practical realism on display in the ruins of Tacloban.

Consider China's rude awakening from the viciousness of international media attack over what was considered a paltry contribution to humanitarian aid (at the time China herself suffered the onslaught of Haiyan in its southern flank), particularly from American news services and their international outlets.

China's response requires no defense. I am an American of Philippine descent teaching English in China's northeast in Manchuria so I bridge the three countries involved. To help understand contemporary China, I was in Ya-an in Sichuan this summer where a 2008 quake devastated the area, eliciting an outpouring of worldwide aid, but the replay in 2012 had the locals saying, "Thanks, but no, thanks" to offers of financial aid from the international community. They resolved to rebuild their communities from the ground up themselves with national assistance. Not without blemish, we note. Internal fundraising included fake claims and luxuriant expenditures from those who heeded their greed at the expense of a needful mass.

When a Pinay in Leyte-Samar was asked what she thought of China's meager relief response, she said, "Oh, we do not think in terms of how much; to anything offered, we say, salamat [thank you]." The first Chinese volunteers who landed to deliver aid heard typhoon victims egging them on with the Zhongwen "kuai, kuai, kuai" (quick, quick, quick) to get them where they were needed.

Quietly, but quickly, a flotilla of 50 U.S. naval vessels and more than 10,000 personnel delivered relief food and water by sea, land, and air. A critic of military imperial presence and pretensions in the region, I genuinely doff my hat to the organized grunts and fliers who delivered needed goods. We can get our drone technology to serve weather forecasting, and military discipline to organize humanitarian efforts, and I reserve the option to execute my ROTC hand salute each time I see Old Glory flying over military equipment and personnel!

Pinoy People Power is a phenomenon around the world, aped in the gathered crowd of Arab Spring to even the clashing but dancing Red and Yellow Thais who leave on their own volition after occupying public buildings.

People Power in the reconstruction of a new Samar-Leyte (the resort island of Guiuan, Eastern Samar is already high profile) is the Pinoy's agenda, harnessing the native powers of balikatan and bayanihan, forgiving but managing the rapacious propertied class and the opportunistic looters, toward a resilient and creative Pinoy-landia! And do so, in the new but now widely used term in a normally laidback land: kuai, kuai, kuai!

street because garages are full of stuff. And when Angelenos run out of space there, they rent storage lockers, where from time to time they visit their extra things.

Maybe this year, we can work toward ending the potlatch season. Let's stop buying and giving things people don't want and don't need.

If you feel a need to give, give food to the hungry, clothes and toys to those in need, or donations to victims of storms, violence or conflict. A plate of homemade cookies or some other delicacy delivered personally is a much better way to remember friends and family than a meaningless generic gift, a "dustable" to sit on the shelf or yet another ill-fitting sweater in the wrong color. And most older people need even fewer things. Unfortunately, what they really want—youth, vigor, health—are things we can't give them. But they, and I'm sure many others, would appreciate a call, a card or a visit from family, neighbors and friends. So will you.

Where's the Christian compassion?

By KAREN OWEN

THE FREE-LANCE STAR (FREDERICKSBURG, VA.)

Years ago, I wrote a column that asked whether the term "Christian conservative" was an oxymoron. At that time, I'd seen little evidence of the compassionate conservatism that George W. Bush had called for, and it seems we've gone downhill since.

How can we call ourselves—and practically insist that we are—a Christian nation when we seemingly ignore so many of the teachings of Christ?

Isn't compassion part of it? Or was that just my imagination as a little girl attending Sunday school at the family Presbyterian church?

Didn't the Golden Rule mention something about treating others as you would wish to be treated yourself?

If Hallmark replaces "gay" with "fun" on a Christmas ornament featuring the words from "Deck the Halls," why aren't we bothered by the insult to a subset of the U.S. population?

If we see someone down on his luck standing at the entrance to the highway, holding a sign saying "Please help," we don't just look away—some of us actively despise that person. If he's poor, or mentally ill, or out of a job, or a substance abuser, well, it's his fault (I'm not my brother's keeper).

If Virginia ranks 46th in its commitment to Medicaid, while being one of the country's wealthier states, we don't address how the poor or uninsured are less worthy of health care. Instead, we say derisively that they're just looking for "free stuff."

If government shutdown results in furloughed workers not receiving a paycheck, we say: fire them—we don't need their services, and we don't care what happens to them or their families.

If a young person can't find a job because business—not government—won't hire here at home but instead prefers to make big profits for itself and its shareholders while hiring someone in India to do the work, we call that person "feral" if he urinates in the park or has no place to live.

If the federal deficit reaches such levels that we all admit government programs must be pared down, we say, begin with Social Security, or food stamps, or formula for babies—babies who are living and breathing right now. It wouldn't occur to us to look at the military-industrial complex. Billions spent on "security" by NSA? Also not mentioned.

If Congress enacts legislation that offers assistance to the less fortunate—something somehow provided by every other developed nation—we say, don't turn us into a socialist state. We don't need your stinkin' help, thank you very much, and no one else should be a beneficiary, either.

Bus service, so that the less fortunate can get to a job should they be lucky enough to find one? Why should my tax dollars pay for their transportation?

When President Obama makes a mistake or misleads, we use words such as "liar," "Manchurian," "Muslim," "traitor" and "despot," and ask why, oh why, hasn't he yet been impeached? We could use less incendiary words to make our point, but choose not to.

I'd like to think that this is not representative of most Americans, but I'm not so sure. The same people calling the kettle black complain bitterly about insults to the tea party. But it's OK to call names if Obama is the target. Remember a time when it was considered unpatriotic to bad-mouth the president, even when we disagreed with him? I do.

And speaking of patriotism, what I love most—coming almost exclusively from the right—is the reference to themselves as "patriots," or "real Americans." Supposedly, they're the only ones who really have respect for—or understanding of—the Constitution. Only they know what our Founding Fathers had in mind, and they're happy to interpret it for us.

Ah, yes, they're patriots. Much the same as the Dallas Cowboys calling themselves "America's team." The implication is clear: The rest of us don't care about America. We want the U.S. to fail.

In my book, these not-so-polite people who seethe or call for rebellion are anything but patriotic. Anyone—Dems, too!—who forgets that government requires compromise needs a serious lesson in civics. The process requires a willingness to at least listen to the other side. It requires an ability to realize that the sun doesn't shine on the same lazy dog's tail all the time. Sometimes, one's candidate doesn't win the election.

When that happens, party leaders must lick their wounds, roll up their sleeves, do some soul-searching and continue on with the work of government.

Now, I'll admit that it was bad that Obamacare was pushed through without the vote of one Republican. But elections have consequences. It was also bad that Nancy Pelosi said we had to read the bill to discover what was in it. Today, its rollout has been the very definition of dysfunction.

But it is equally bad that we have no problem with poor people or the uninsured dying rather than receiving quality medical care.

It's bad when we allow one school system to be woefully inferior to another, and do nothing about it. It's bad that the mentally ill have little recourse but to sleep in homeless shelters or under a bridge. It's bad when our veterans have trouble receiving what few benefits or treatment they deserve after service to our country. It's bad that we don't care.

And if we do care, and raising taxes is what it would take to fix what ails us, we are opposed. On General Principle. We don't want Big Government. We want better highways, safe food, new school buildings and relief if a hurricane hits, but we're opposed to paying for it or for helping anyone, no matter how deserving.

I'm ready to hear real ideas from the right as to how it proposes to deal with social issues. Not anger at Obama and the Dems. Not name-calling or finger-pointing, but thoughtful proposals. I have yet to hear what they are. The Party of No wasn't always so mean-spirited. Neither was our "Christian nation."

I'm waiting. I don't expect a response other than an attack on our president, or on me for having the temerity to ask for workable solutions. But I wait nonetheless.

Saipan International School continues to celebrate its 20th year of educational excellence with community gatherings that highlight the school's diversity and commitment to public service. Last week, America's Thanksgiving holiday was the focus for a multinational feast that fed hundreds of eager participants but even more importantly, focused on the "sharing and gratitude" virtues that resulted in 1,340 canned-foods collected for the Typhoon Haiyan victims in The Philippines. Moreover, SIS raised $720 in cash donations for the Red Cross via a turkey raffle. (PR)

Bank of Guam supports deployed Guam Guardsmen

By SGT EDDIE SIGUENZA
GUAM ARMY NATIONAL GUARD

CAMP PHOENIX, Afghanistan—The soldiers of Task Force Guam received support once again from one of their island's longest-running businesses.

Guam Army National Guardsmen stationed at nearly a dozen locations in Afghanistan received children's artwork courtesy of Bank of Guam, one of Guam's oldest institutions, in cooperation with the Guam National Guard's Family Programs Office. Hundreds of drawings reached the soldiers serving Operation Enduring Freedom and majority is displayed on office walls, billeting rooms, and even inside tactical vehicles.

"Our Family Readiness Groups and Family Programs Office worked together, reaching out to the community," said Sharleen R. Perez, Guam Family Readiness support assistant. "The results were amazing; many children participated and provided personal touches on their artwork. Their projects will be given to our deployed soldiers."

According to Perez, Bank of Guam reached out to the Fam-

Members of Foxtrot Company, 1st Battalion, 294th Infantry Regiment, Guam Army National Guard, show their enthusiasm after receiving children's artwork late November at Kandahar Airfield, Kandahar province, Afghanistan. ily Programs Office and wanted to do something special for the deployed service members. The financial institution received a $1,500 grant from the Armed Forces Financial Network and wanted to work with the Guam Guard's Family Readiness Groups to see how it can have children provide artwork for those deployed.

Bank of Guam named this project Hu Hahasso Hao, which means "Thinking of You," themed appropriately for the Guam Army National Guard's 1st Battalion, 294th Infantry Regiment.

Approximately 600 soldiers are wrapping up their OEF mission and will return home in a matter of weeks.

"We appreciate the cooperation of the Guam National Guard Family Programs Office, Bank of Guam, and the children who took the time to provide these drawings," said Capt. Joey San Nicolas, Echo Company commander. "The soldiers enjoy the artwork. Our office is decorated with them. They bring a touch of home to our area of operations."

"While working with Bank of Guam, we came up with a venue (Hagatna Shopping Center) that will be open to everyone to take part of the project," Perez said. "The young participants were able to submit their artwork and receive a prize from Bank of Guam. How could they resist the free 'yellow ribbon' face painting!"

We also had children interact with rear detachment soldiers. These soldiers were able to talk about their jobs and responsibilities in the military."

Bank of Guam is the island's largest financial institution that also operates in California and locations throughout the South Pacific. At least five Guam Guardsmen deployed to Afghanistan for Operation Enduring Freedom—including Bravo Company's Sgt. Cliff Tajeron, Delta Company's Spc. Rusty P. Santos, Echo Company's Spc. Gerald M.C. Borja, and Charlie Company's Spc. Joshua D. Bernardo and Spc. Greg J. Pecina—are employed with the Bank of Guam.

"Everyone appreciates the support we get from our community. This is an example of the tremendous assistance that has helped our aoldiers throughout this deployment," said Lt. Col. Michael Tougher, Task Force Guam commander. "It's very meaningful because the artwork came from our children. Everyone's touched by this."

"Island unity" is how Capt. Romeo Sanchez described the community effort. Sanchez, Delta Company commander at Camp Stone, Herat province, said, "This is something very special for the aoldiers in Afghanistan. Children put their personal touches on these works of art. These were dedicated to us and we really appreciate the efforts of everyone involved."

"The event was an overall success. Bank of Guam looks forward to working with us again," Perez said. "We can't wait to see what else we will be doing for our military. When deployed service members receive this artwork, we know they'll take the time to appreciate the wonderful work done by the many little hands. They know that it may be a small gesture of appreciation, however they appreciate our military with their big hearts!"

The Family Readiness Support Assistant program mission statement is "To empower commanders in their duty to deliver the Total Army Family Program (AR 600-20) so that soldiers and families are entitled, informed, educated, assisted, and made ready for the unique demands of military life before, during, and after deployment."

Combat engineers execute explosives training on Tinian

By LANCE CPL. ANTONIO RUBIO
MARINE CORPS AIR STATION IWAKUNI

TINIAN, Northern Mariana Islands—Combat engineers transformed Charlie runway into a demolition range on Nov. 29 at Tinian's North Field to expand the runway capabilities.

The purpose of the demolition was to clear runway Charlie and cross-train with Marines from other sections in explosives use.

Forager Fury II is a joint exercise designed to employ and assess combat power generation in a deployed and austere environment. The Marines are with Marine Wing Support Squadron 171, Marine Aircraft Group 12, 1st Marine Aircraft Wing, III Marine Expeditionary Force.

"Today, we're doing a demo shoot, to mostly remove trees that [heavy equipment] had trouble removing," said 1st Lt. Taylor Keithley, a platoon commander of MWSS-171. "Marines are receiving training with expedite charges, shape charges, and other charges. This is something we don't get to do very often in the MWSS."

Operations on Tinian allow Marines to get hands-on demonstrations and build their efficiency handling explosives, according to Keithley.

"This training prepares for real world operations in the event that we have to set up a landing field on an island and fight pretty much anywhere," said Keithley. "Here we're prepared to clear a runway so MAG-12 can land [fixed-wing aircraft]."

This training provides Marines cross-training in other military occupational specialties participating in FF II, according to Sgt. David Noe, a foreman with MWSS-171.

"There's always going to be various MOSs where ever you go so learning different ones and adapting to your situation important," said Noe.

The Marines used C4 and TNT during the demo, and stressed the importance of safety while detonating charges, according to Noe.

"Safety is the most important thing," said Lance Cpl. Tristan Armstrong. "Everyone is a safety officer and everyone needs to understand the consequences of their actions in the demo. If they don't, then they can't participant in the demo, because it takes just a single mistake to be catastrophic, even mishandling the smallest piece of demo."

While maintaining safety and gaining experience were paramount to the training, it was the ability to work with other sections that truly made the range a success, according to Keithley.

"We actually get to work in tangent with our [heavy equipment] and [motor transportation] brothers and we get to come together as a team," said Keithley. "Today, we really got to see how the MWSS fights as a whole."

Grief support meeting on Dec. 12

The December meeting of the grief support group for parents and siblings that normally meets on the first Thursday of each month will be held on Thursday, Dec. 12, from 6pm to 7:30pm, in the NMPASI conference room on Middle Road, in Gualo Rai.

We offer understanding and hope to bereaved parents, siblings and grandparents who are grieving the loss of a child of any age, and from any cause. We provide a safe, confidential setting, in which to share our experiences, while respecting and supporting each other, and listening. We have "been there." We do not espouse any specific religious or philosophical ideology. There is no "right way" to grieve, and family members are welcome to come to share or just to listen.

The meeting is modeled on The Compassionate Friends, whose mission is to assist families toward the positive resolution of grief following the death of a child of any age and to provide information to help others to be supportive. Today more than 600 chapters serving all 50 states plus Washington D.C., Puerto Rico, and Guam offer friendship, understanding, and hope to bereaved parents, siblings and grandparents and other family members during the natural grieving process after a child has died.

For more information, call Jill Derickson at 287-5337 or email jilld@pticom.com. To learn more about The Compassionate Friends, visit their website at www.compassionatefriends.org. (PR)

Care Club fundraiser nets $1.3K for Haiyan relief efforts

The Tinian Care Club fundraiser for Typhoon Haiyan/Yolanda relief efforts on Nov. 30, 2013, was a certified success, thanks to the joint effort of the Mayor of Tinian's Office, UNIFIL, and the Tinian Lions Club.

Tinian first lady Doris Dela Cruz said, "It was great fun. So many people came out to play bingo and just support the effort to help those people who are suffering from the typhoon in the Philippines."

Dela Cruz created the Care Club during the first year of her husband's administration. "This is an easy and fun way for us to help people outside the government. On Friday and Saturday evenings, the mayor will turn on the utilities at the Antonio M. Borja Amphitheater, so we can have a public bingo to help raise funds for people in need. Sometimes it is for medical needs, sometimes for education. It isn't a lot but it helps. Most of all, it is good to see our people coming together to share," said Dela Cruz.

Last Saturday, the Tinian Care Club was able to raise $1,300. The Care Club will write a check for that amount to the CNMI Chapter of the American Red Cross, who will send it to where it is needed most in the Philippine relief effort. (PR)

Free film shows 'being green' through the ages

First Friday Films is inviting the public to the American Memorial Park on Friday, Dec. 6, at 6:30pm for a free showing of A Fierce Green Fire.

A Fierce Green Fire is an amazing take on the history of the environmental movement over the last 50 years, from the beginning of conservation to modern times. The film shows footage of conservation of the Grand Canyon in the '60s, the Love Canal battle of the '70s, Greenpeace's controversial campaigns, the '80s crisis to save the Amazon, and the current conversation about climate change. Each act of the film sheds new light on the most famous environmental battles of the last century, and it is a must-see for anyone who studies, works, or plays in the environment.

Before the film, Dr. Peter Peshut will introduce the events in the film by sharing his experiences living and working in the environmental field through each of these decades. Peshut has earned degrees in civil engineering, marine biology, and environmental science and has worked for nearly 30 years on environmental issues in both the government and private sectors. Nineteen of those years have been spent in the Pacific Islands, including American Samoa, Palau, FSM, Hawaii, Guam and the CNMI.

First Friday Films is a partnership between American Memorial Park, the Division of Environmental Quality, Coastal Resources Management, and the Humanities Council, with support from other organizations and individuals. This particular film is sponsored by DEQ. As always, our film events are free and open to the public. This event will run about two hours.

Guam Nat'l Guard battalion now preparing to go home

Task Force Guam, also known as 1-294th Infantry Regiment, Guam Army National Guard, is preparing to start its redeployment process from Afghanistan, to their mobilization site at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, according to Maj. Gen. Benny M. Paulino, Guam National Guard Adjutant General.

tant General.

The unit is tentatively expected to start their redeployment process sometime in the middle of next month, and may last through early January.

"The island community has provided a tremendous amount of support to our deployed troops and their families. As our battalion begins its journey back home, I am very confident that people of Guam will be prepared and ready to welcome our warriors home with open arms," Paulino said.

The battalion's close to 600 soldiers deployed to Afghanistan early this year in support of Operation Enduring Freedom-Afghanistan.

The unit began its deployment, flying to Camp Shelby in February, where they conducted their mobilization training for several weeks, before proceeding to their mission locations in Afghanistan. Once in country, they were dubbed "Task Force Guam."

The Guam Guardsmen were dispersed throughout Afghanistan, covering thousands of square miles, with a mission of providing security forces, guardian angels and personal security detachments. Its overall mission was to support the NATO Training Mission-Afghanistan's effort establishing an Afghan-led security force.

The 1-294th IN RGT is composed of soldiers from Guam and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

The activation of the 1-294th IN RGT is largest group of reserve component troops to be mobilized and deployed from Guam. (PR)

Ordnance disposal unit tie up with Singapore's navy for joint training

JOINT REGION MARIANAS PUBLIC AFFAIRS

SANTA RITA, Guam—Sailors from Explosive Ordnance Disposal Mobile Unit 5 partnered with members of the Republic of Singapore Navy for the bi-annual Miata Exercise that kicked off at U.S. Naval Base Guam on Dec. 3.

The joint training builds interoperability between the two groups who have a continued working agreement. The exercise will continue through Dec. 14.

"This is something we enjoy doing and it enhances our ability to develop and integrate our [explosive ordnance disposal] techniques," said Lt. j.g. Joseph Lynch, EODMU-5. "They're a very reputable force with extremely well-developed capabilities. We hope to exchange our ideas and information so we can see how they operate, and hopefully integrate some of their tactics into our future operations."

With the robotics training, EODMU-5 practiced using RSN's PackBot to investigate a bag with a potential threat, while RSN members used EODMU-5's Talon Mark II to maneuver around an obstacle and to pick up and transport batteries into a container.

Since these movements were done through remote controls, it promoted the use of precise movements and decision-making. These robots help minimize the danger to EOD technicians by allowing them to identify and handle ordnance at a distance.

EOD 3rd Class Jacob Trefney said he was glad to work with the RSN and learn from their counterparts as it strengthens the relationship between the two nations.

"It's definitely an awesome opportunity for everyone involved," he said. "We can see each other run drills, see each other's equipment, how they use their equipment and the different adaptations that they've added."

During the Miata Exercise, EODMU-5 and RSN plan to perform render safe procedures, respond to a simulated threat aboard ship and conduct other trainings at various sites that will help round out their knowledge of explosives handling and response.

EODMU-5 deploys and employs tailored EOD units to locate, identify, render safe and remove conventional, chemical, biological, nuclear, radiological, and improvised explosive hazards in order to enable access for joint, naval, and special operations forces within the Western Pacific Theater of Operations and elsewhere, when directed.

Guam Legislature to hold relief drive for Haiyan victims in Palau HAGÁTÑA, Guam—The Guam Legislature is organizing a relief drive for the Palauan victims of Supertyphoon Haiyan this Friday, Dec. 6 from 4pm to 6pm at both the ITC and Maga'láhi Kepuha intersections.

On its path to the Philippines, Supertyphoon Haiyan hit Kayangel, the northernmost island of the Republic of Palau on Nov. 7, 2013. The residents of Kayangel suffered great damage from sustained winds of about 160 miles per hour with gusts to about 175 miles per hour. All but two buildings on the island were destroyed. Corn and taro farms were also damaged during the storm. It will be years before the island recovers from this damage.

Speaker Judith T. Won Pat, Ed.D., invited both the Office of the Governor and the Judiciary of Guam to participate in the drive.

"Supertyphoon Haiyan's damaging winds did not spare our region, causing incredible hardship for our sisters and brothers in Kayangel," said Won Pat. "I ask all our people to show their support this Friday by giving what they can to help rebuild the homes, farms, school and clinic that were ravaged by the storm."

HSC-25 detachments 1, 6 return from deployments

YIGO, Guam—Helicopter Sea Combat Squadron 25 will hold a homecoming ceremony on Dec. 9 to welcome back sailors assigned to Detachment 1 and Detachment 6.

Detachment 1 is returning after completion of a seven-month deployment continuing HSC-25's longstanding mission of supporting 5th and 7th Fleet operations aboard USNS Amelia Earhart and USNS Charles Drew. During the deployment, Detachment 1 also supported the George Washington Strike Group, Commander, Task Force 70, Commander, Destroyer Squadron 15, and numerous Australian naval vessels.

Detachment 1 was one of the first U.S. Naval Rotary Wing assets to arrive in the Philippines to aid and survey the devastation caused by Super Typhoon Haiyan. Detachment 1 assisted in humanitarian aid and disaster relief efforts by delivering more than 70,000 lbs of drinking water, 18,000 lbs of food and 16,000 lbs of diesel fuel, and completing numerous passenger transfers.

Detachment 6 returns following a six-month deployment in support of 7th Fleet operations in the Western Pacific. The detachment operated MH-60S Knighthawk helicopters to provide continuous search and rescue support, anti-surface warfare, special operations forces support, and high-value unit protection to USS Bonhomme Richard, which is the Navy's only forward-deployed multipurpose amphibious assault ship. During the deployment, Detachment 6 flew more than 1,300 hours, moved 2.5 million lbs of cargo, and transferred 959 passengers in support of U.S. Pacific Command. In addition, the detachment was responsible for six medical evacuations and multiple searches resulting in one rescue.

In addition to providing SAR support underway, HSC-25 provides 24-hour search and rescue and medical evacuation services for Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands as well as special operations forces support, anti-surface warfare and personnel recovery training to local and visiting forces. (PR)

‘Aging Center not a nursing home for elderly’

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The CNMI's Aging Center is often mistaken as a nursing home for the island's elderly and it is about time that this misconception be corrected, according to Aging Center executive director Walter Manglona.

“They mistake this place as a nursing home but it's not. Our Aging Center functions like a daycare center for our senior citizens. They come here and avail of the services and return home after each day's programs and activities,” explained Manglona in a recent visit to his office. He said he wants to enlighten the public on what the department's role and functions are all about.

According to him, the center accommodates over 80 senior citizens daily. These are active elderly who physically participate in the activities offered at the center. He expects the number to grow as more applications are pending for review.

“We encourage them to come in everyday. If some of them are unable to take care of themselves, they can bring in their caregiver—either a family member or contracted caregiver—to come and take care of them because we don't have certified nurse here to take care of each and every one of them,” Manglona told Saipan Tribune.

Apart from the active clientele—also referred to as congregates—the Aging Center also serves close to 200 bedridden man'amko, those with disabilities, and elderly members who live in secluded areas and villages, making it difficult for them to travel to the center. Free meals are delivered each day to the homes of these beneficiaries, along with free food for their providers and caregivers. These beneficiaries fall under the agency's homebound program.

Since last year, Manglona said, the center has been seeing a continued growth in the number of its clientele. He described this as a positive development for the department, whose core mission is to serve and care for the island's elderly.

He said that regular monitoring of the senior citizens' health is among their prime objectives.

“We've been told by doctors that anything in moderation is fine for our man'amko. So we allow them to eat a little pastries now and again, but just in moderation. Additionally, we always encourage our visitors and guests to offer healthy food for our senior citizens,” he said. By doing so, everyone plays a role in caring for the island's seniors, he added.

The Aging Center is under the Department of Community and Cultural Affairs. Most of its funding for operation are sourced from federal grants that pay for the services it provides to the elderly.

Saipan Tribune learned that under the Title III-B (Support Services Program), the man'amko are offered physical, mental, and social services and programs, including computer literacy, music class, arts and crafts, dance classes, water therapy, and off-island trips, among others.

The agency also receives funds from the federal Title III-C program, which is for the Nutrition Services Program, while Title III-D provides preventive health services such as health risk assessments, routine health screening, and nutritional counseling.

Title III-E, or the National Family Caregiver Support Services, allows the agency to help family members who care for individuals who are 60 years of age and older, grandparents, and other family members caring for children with developmental disabilities.

Aging Center clients are also protected under Title VII, which is for the Elder Abuse Prevention Program and Ombudsman. CNMI Public Law 9-21 provides for the protection of the elderly from physical and mental cruelty. They are provided legal assistance services. Under the Ombudsman program, staff conducts regular visits to the homes of the elderly to ensure that their health and safety, welfare, and rights are protected at all times.

The center also benefits from Title V, or the Senior Community Service Employment Program, which provides a community service and part-time work-based training to eventually place participants in unsubsidized employment.

Twins share a birthday, but shouldn't have to share gifts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm the proud mother of four beautiful children—a daughter, a son and 8-year-old twin boys. I am having a hard time getting people to understand that my boys, whom I rarely refer to as “twins,” are two SEPARATE people! Every year at Christmas some family members buy gifts for our daughter and our eldest son, and then ONE gift our younger boys are expected to share. Abby, they once received one T-shirt, which was meant for both of them. This also happens on their birthday.

Yes, they share a room and they are twins, but they deserve the same respect as their siblings. We have never dressed them alike. They are individuals who should be treated as such like their sister and brother.

Christmas is around the corner, and I don't know how to tell my family members to please buy gifts for both the boys. I realize we have a large family. I don't expect anyone to go broke. The gift can be a small one. Can you please help me find the right words without sounding greedy?

MOM OF FOUR IN OTTAWA

DEAR MOM: Your relatives don't appear to be particularly sensitive, or they would already realize that children are individuals whether they happen to be wombmates or not. Their “frugality” puts a damper on what are supposed to be happy occasions. It would not be “greedy” to tell them that if they can't afford a gift for each child—regardless of how small it might be—it would cause fewer hurt feelings if they sent none at all for any of your children.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend's daughter, “Heather,” came to me the other day and told me a girl at school is having sex with a 36-year-old. Abby, the girl is only 13. When I told Heather I wanted to tell a counselor, she begged me not to because she's new in the school and doesn't want to be labeled a snitch.

I am torn about what to do. I don't want her mad at me, but I can't just stand back and let this continue to happen. Heather and I are nine years apart, so I don't really come across as a parental figure. I don't know if I should tell her dad or not. Please help.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO

DEAR DON'T KNOW: The girl in question is being raped. The 36-year-old is a predator. What you should do is find out the girl's name and then let her parents know what is going on so they can possibly inform the police. If you can't locate the parents, talk to a counselor at the school, because a counselor is ethically and legally required to report a crime like this.

DEAR ABBY: I recently realized that my parents lied about their wedding date. Because of my mother's age and health, I haven't told her I know the truth. My father passed away several years ago, so his obituary states the date they always used. When my mother passes, do I state the true date in her obituary or perpetuate the lie?

DAUGHTER WITH A SECRET

DEAR DAUGHTER: I think you should do whatever you think your mother would want when the time comes. The ages of the offspring are not usually mentioned in a person's obituary, and unless your friends read the wedding date with calculators in hand, I doubt they will notice the relationship between your age and the nuptials. But if anyone should be so tasteless as to say anything, just smile and say, “Yes, I was a love child.”

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Frankie Muniz, 28; Keri Hilson, 31; Margaret Cho, 45; Little Richard, 81.

Happy Birthday: Try taking a different approach this year when dealing with friends, lovers or authority figures. Show enthusiasm and you will inspire those you encounter. Deals can be made and opportunities will unfold. If you have to use force or apply pressure, move on. This is a year of growth and expansion, not of wasting time on the impossible. Your numbers are 8, 13, 17, 21, 35, 39, 43.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't just sit back; make choices and get things moving. Don't let what others do paralyze you. Use your energy, time and money wisely. Restlessness will cause distress if you don't take action. Don't assume, overreact or overpend. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep moving. You'll be surprised at how much you accomplish. Focus, discipline and showing off your skills and talents will help you reach your goals. Love is on the rise and romance should be planned for the evening hours. ★★★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't push your luck. Observe and consider your options. Deception and disillusionment regarding a partnership is apparent. Protect your assets, possessions and reputation. Make alterations based on what works for you, not on what someone tries to manipulate. ★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emotions will surface regarding contracts and money matters. Opportunities are within reach, and you should not hesitate to make a move if it will benefit your home, family and future. Love is in the stars and romance will bring you added benefits. ★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try something new or travel to an unfamiliar destination. What you learn through the experiences you have will help you rethink the way to move forward. New beginnings will help you put an end to regrets or setbacks. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone with experience and wisdom will offer you advice. Check facts before you decide to make a move based on what you've been told. The information given may need to be updated in order for it to work in your favor. ★★★★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bad influences will affect your emotional well-being. Don't make a move or change the way you do things based on demands that someone else is making. Use your intelligence to help counteract anyone trying to take what belongs to you. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put what you want to do into play. You can get ahead if you are honest and refuse to give in to defeat. Developing a new approach to an old idea will pay off. Back away from anyone looking for a handout. ★★★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remembering the past will help you avoid making the same mistake twice. Question any information you are given. Base whatever move you decide to make on facts. Clear up debts and take care of any pending legal, financial or medical matters. ★★

EUGENIA LAST

THE LAST WORD IN ASTROLOGY

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Coast along and share your ideas and plans with people you feel can contribute to your goals. A hidden source may give you reason to question someone's intentions. Don't get involved in a partnership that appears to have a hidden agenda. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speak up. You have to make it clear what you want. A contract will ensure that you are taken care of financially. A change in the way you live and earn your living is apparent and will lead to a brighter future. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Participate, but don't give away your secrets. The more mysterious you are, the greater the interest will become in what you have to offer. Romance is in the stars. Make special plans and you will enhance your love life. ★★★★★

Pistons snap Miami's 10-game win streak, 107-97

MIAMI (AP)—It was just a game, not a playoff series. Still, Brandon Jennings finally got a long-awaited win over the Miami Heat.

And he made the two biggest plays to get it done.

Jennings made a deep, well-covered 3-pointer to snuff out one Miami rally with 4:09 left, then stole the ball from LeBron James to set up another score two minutes later, and the Detroit Pistons beat the Heat 107-97 on Tuesday night to snap the NBA champions' 10-game winning streak.

Kyle Singler scored 18 points to lead seven Detroit players in double figures, Andre Drummond had 18 rebounds—more than any three Heat players combined—and Greg Monroe and Rodney Stuckey each scored 16 for the Pistons.

"We had a lot of good performances from a lot of people," Pistons coach Maurice Cheeks said. "Then we just held our composure because we knew that at some point they'd make a run. Brandon made that big 3 and we were able to hold on. When Brandon hit that big 3, it kind of settled us down a little bit."

It might have deflated the Heat, too.

Miami trailed by as many as 18 and then got within three on a dunk by James midway through the fourth. The Heat then missed their next three shots, two of them 3-point tries that would have knotted the game, before Jennings connected from 26 feet out—the dagger from 90 feet," James said afterward—to put Detroit up by six.

"Just the way the game goes," said Heat guard Norris Cole, who was defending Jennings on the play. "He made a big shot. Just got to tip your hat."

The Heat never got any closer. They nearly did, being down seven and with James charging downcourt with about two minutes left, but Jennings stole the ball away, brought it to the other end and set up Monroe for an easy bucket that sealed the deal for Detroit.

And for Jennings—who predicted his Milwaukee Bucks would oust the Heat in six games when they met in the opening round of last season's playoffs, then got swept—it was a small measure of comeuppance.

"They didn't make shots down the stretch that they usually do," said Jennings, who's in his first season with the Pistons. "We're still getting better and better. But we can't have a stretch like in the fourth, with a lead, that we couldn't get a bucket."

James and Michael Beasley each scored 23 for Miami. The Heat played without guard Dwyane Wade, the All-Star sitting for the fourth time this season to rest a sore knee.

Miami shot a season-low 44 percent.

Detroit Pistons' Brandon Jennings (7) shoots a 3-pointer over Miami Heat's Norris Cole (30) in the fourth quarter of an NBA basketball game, Tuesday, Dec. 3, 2013, in Miami.

"It's a miss or make league at times," James said. "They made. We missed."

Jennings and Josh Smith each scored 15 for Detroit, which got 10 points apiece from Drummond and Kentavious Caldwell-Pope. Chris Bosh scored 14 and Ray Allen added 12 for Miami, which was outrebounded 46-34.

The Heat had more turnovers (eight) than field goals (seven) in the first period, missed 12 of their first 16 shots and found themselves down by 11 points before the game was 11 minutes old. And it wasn't like the Pistons were all that hot, either - they shot 48 percent in the quarter.

When the second quarter started, the Pistons were sizzling.

Drummond had four points in an 8-0 spurt to start the second, one that gave Detroit an 18-point lead with 9:30 left in the half.

With that, the Pistons became just the second opposing team in the last 83 Miami home games, including playoffs, to lead by that many on the Heat's home floor.

And that was just one of many instances where the Heat were left shaking their collective heads. James had 14 points in the second quarter, one of the very few reasons why it wasn't a total Detroit runaway by the break.

"It was really tough to get a flow," Bosh said. "We kept turning the ball over, we didn't have the necessary energy we needed tonight and we got beat."

76ers 126, Magic 125, 20T

In Philadelphia, Michael Carter-Williams had 27 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists for his first career triple-double, and Thaddeus Young added 25 points and 12 rebounds to lead Philadelphia past Orlando in double-overtime on Tuesday night.

Carter-Williams got his 10th assist on a dish to Young late in the second OT to put the Sixers up 125-120.

Evan Turner had 24 points for Philadelphia, which snapped a four-game losing streak.

Arron Afflalo scored a career-high 43 points for the Magic and Glen Davis had a career-high 33. Victor Oladipo had 26 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists to join Carter-Williams as rookies with a triple-double.

Turner was whistled for his fifth foul with 12.1 seconds left in the first OT on Afflalo's 3-point attempt. Afflalo made all three free throws, tying the score at 118.

Nuggets 111, Nets 87

In New York, Timofey Mozgov had 17 points and a career-high 20 rebounds in another superb effort by Denver's bench, and the Nuggets raced by the Brooklyn Nets 111-87 Tuesday night for their seventh straight victory.

Kenneth Faried and Jordan Hamilton each added 15 points for the Nuggets, who got 57 points from the NBA's second-highest scoring second unit. That wasn't quite the 72 they rang up against Toronto on Sunday, but it was more than enough to dominate the third quarter against the short-handed Nets.

Denver outscored Brooklyn 31-15 in the period that has given the Nets season-long problems, putting it away with a 15-0 run midway through the quarter.

Joe Johnson scored 22 points for the Nets, who still haven't won consecutive games this season and fell to 5-13 heading into their nationally televised first meeting Thursday with the just-a-little-worse Knicks (3-13).

Andray Blatche added 15 for the Nets, playing without injured starters Paul Pierce and Deron Williams.

Celtics 108, Bucks 100

In Boston, Jordan Crawford scored 25 points, Jeff Green added 18 and Boston avoided a third loss to struggling Milwaukee this season.

Brandon Bass added 16 points and nine rebounds, Avery Bradley scored 15 and Jared Sullinger finished with 12 points as all five starters scored in double figures for Boston, which had lost two of three.

The Bucks had just snapped an 11-game losing streak with a 92-85 win over the Celtics on Saturday in Milwaukee, but couldn't quite rally from a 13-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

O.J. Mayo scored 19, and Brandon Knight had 15 points and six assists for Milwaukee. Khris Middleton added 14 points for the Bucks, who were outrebounded by the Celtics 40-33.

Grizzlies 110, Suns 91

In Memphis, Tenn., Jon Leuer scored a career-high 23 points, Ed Davis added 21 points and 12 rebounds, and Memphis made the best of a makeshift lineup to defeat Phoenix.

Leuer and Davis got plenty of playing time because of injuries to front-line starters Zach Randolph and Marc Gasol.

Leuer connected on 10 of 13 shots, Davis made 8 of 11 and seven players finished in double figures for Memphis, which shot 55 per cent from the floor.

Mike Conley had 18 points and 14 assists for Memphis, which snapped a four-game losing streak at home.

Marcus Morris led the Suns with 18 points, Goran Dragic added 16 and Miles Plumlee had 11.

Mavericks 89, Hornets 82

In Dallas, Dirk Nowitzki recovered from a rough start to score 25 points, including 14 in the fourth quarter, and the Mavericks kept Charlotte winless in Dallas.

Nowitzki, who was 1 of 10 from the field in the first half, and Monta Ellis took over late after struggling most of the game. They scored the last 19 points to help the Mavericks outscore Charlotte 29-15 in the fourth.

Al Jefferson scored 19 points, and Gerald Henderson and Kemba Walker had 16 apiece for the Hornets, who are 0-10 in Dallas and 1-17 overall against the Mavericks. That's the worst record in the league for one team against another.

USOC chairman signals intent to bid for 2024 Games

The chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee says "it is our intention to bid" for the 2024 Olympics if a number of criteria are met - the strongest indication yet that the United States will put forth a bid city by the end of next year.

Among the requirements chairman Larry Probst listed as the USOC makes its decision: "Do we have the right message, the right technical plan, the right leader, right financial support, governmental support?"

"A lot of things have to fall into place," Probst said Tuesday after the USOC board's quarterly meeting. "But we continue to be focused on that opportunity."

A small group from the USOC has been visiting potential host cities, including Boston, Dallas, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, San Diego, San Francisco and Washington.

CEO Scott Blackmun said the list of cities will be slowly and quietly culled next year, with the process speeding up after the Sochi Olympics in February. The USOC must commit to a bid by the end of 2014.

"From my travels ... the last three or four months, I've heard a lot of encouragement from numerous IOC members about us putting forth a bid for 2024," Probst said. "We continue to focus in that direction."

The International Olympic Committee typically encourages a U.S. city to bid, knowing that interest from the world's most powerful Olympic presence can only serve to build interest in the games. When it comes to awarding the games, however, the IOC strikes a quite different tone. The U.S. hasn't hosted an Olympics since 2002 in Salt Lake City and hasn't hosted a summer games since 1996 in Atlanta.

The country's last two bidders, Chicago and New York, have been humbled in the selection process, each finishing fourth.

Blackmun and Probst have been traveling the globe trying to shore up the USOC's reputation, knowing that is the best way to have a chance at the ultimate prize for an Olympic federation - the honor to serve as host of the Olympics.

Blackmun said the USOC is committed to a private process in determining which city to put forth as the 2024 candidate—unlike previous efforts, which have been public, costly and, at times, embarrassing.

"We've got a handful of good candidates, and that's all we want to say right now," Blackmun said. "Some cities may not want to go forward and may not want that to be public."

The IOC will pick its 2024 host in 2017.

While Probst gave the strongest signal yet that the USOC would put a city in the mix, Blackmun tried to temper that later on the same conference call with reporters.

"We haven't made a decision if we're going to bid at all for 2024," he said. "It's gradual. The list will get smaller." (AP)

Source: Yanks, Ellsbury reach $153M, 7-yr deal

NEW YORK
(AP)—Free agent outfielder Jacoby Ellsbury, fresh off winning the World Series with Boston, reached agreement with the rival New York Yankees on a seven-year contract worth about $153 million, a person familiar with the negotiations said Tuesday night.

Ellsbury is the second major free-agent addition in the Yankees' offseason rebuilding after missing the playoffs for just the second time in 19 years. The center fielder was to take a physical in New York on Wednesday that he must pass before the deal can be finalized, the person said, speaking on condition of anonymity because no statements were authorized.

The Yankees also had been negotiating with outfielder Shin-Soo Choo, who like Ellsbury is represented by agent Scott Boras.

Earlier Tuesday, New York finalized an $85 million, five-year contract with All-Star catcher Brian McCann.

There is a long history of stars moving from Beantown to the Big Apple during their careers. Babe Ruth was the most famous, and Roger Clemens, Wade Boggs and Johnny Damon followed.

Ellsbury, who turned 30 in September, led the majors with 52 stolen bases despite being hobbled late in the season by a broken right foot. The lefty-hitting leadoff man batted .298 with nine homers and 53 RBIs, and the short right-field porch at Yankee Stadium should boost his power numbers.

Ellsbury's deal includes a $21 million option for the 2021 season, with a $5 million buyout. If the option is exercised, the deal would be worth $169 million over eight years.

His agreement may not be finalized this week, and it's possible he could be introduced by the Yankees during a news conference at the winter meetings next week in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

The move would raise the Yankees' luxury tax payroll to about $138 million for 10 players. The Yankees hope to get under the $189 million tax threshold next season, which includes about $177 million for salaries for the 40-man roster and approximately $12 million for benefits.

New York also has been speaking with the agents for Robinson Cano, their All-Star second baseman. The Yankees, who rebuffed his request for a 10-year deal worth more than $300 million, believe he has been in talks with the Seattle Mariners.

Ellsbury won a pair of World Series titles with the Red Sox and was an All-Star in 2011, when he finished second to Detroit's Justin Verlander in AL MVP voting. He has reached the postseason four times and is a career .301 hitter in those 38 games.

After their playoff absence, the Yankees are undergoing a major transformation. Closer Mariano Rivera and Andy Pettitte are retiring, Phil Hughes is leaving to sign with Minnesota and New York appears to be making little effort to retain outfielder Curtis Granderson.

McCann, a seven-time All-Star, is to be introduced at a news conference Thursday at Yankee Stadium.

He receives $17 million in each of the next five seasons, and the Yankees have a $15 million option for 2019 with no buyout. The option becomes McCann's if he has at least 1,000 plate appearances combined in 2017 and 2018, has at least 90 starts at catcher in 2018 and does not end the 2018 season on the disabled list.

His deal includes a full no-trade provision, meaning he cannot be dealt without his consent.

McCann, who turns 30 in February, hit .256 with 20 homers and 57 RBIs in 102 games this year, when he missed the first month following offseason surgery on his right shoulder. He has a .277 average in nine big league seasons with 176 homers and 661 RBIs.

Following the departure of Russell Martin last offseason, Yankees catchers combined for a .213 average, eight homers and 43 RBIs, according to STATS, down from .220, 22 and 64 in 2012.

"We feel we have made a significant improvement to a key position, while adding a high-character presence to our clubhouse," Yankees managing general partner Hal Steinbrenner said in a statement. "Our work this offseason has just begun, but we feel this is an important step towards what will be an exciting and rewarding 2014 season for our fans."

Steelers' Tomlin: On-field foray was 'inexcusable'

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Mike Tomlin was "mesmerized."

He was also, the Pittsburgh Steelers coach admits, out of position.

Way out of position.

Tomlin was so awed by the way Baltimore's Jacoby Jones raced through the Steelers crumbling kickoff return unit in the third quarter Thanksgiving night, Tomlin couldn't take himself away from watching it all unfold in high definition on one of M&T Stadium's video boards.

Only when Tomlin—standing on the white strip of grass meant to separate the playing field from the sideline—saw his black-and-gold jacket and black baseball cap flash across the screen did he realize it might be a good time to move.

Too late.

As Tomlin danced to his left, Jones edged right to avoid bowling the coach over. Pittsburgh's Cortez Allen made the tackle after a 73-yard return, a bizarre play that will be remembered far longer than Baltimore's eventual 22-20 victory.

It's an ill-timed two-step the 41-year-old Tomlin allows was a lot of things, namely "embarrassing, inexcusable, illegal and a blunder."

The one thing it wasn't, he insists, was intentional.

"The thought that it could be perceived as intentional never even crossed my mind," Tomlin said Tuesday during a lengthy and candid apology. "I realized I fell short of the expectations of my position in being where I was and my actions on the play. I am not one to seek comfort from that standpoint, so I was just going to take my medicine."

Tomlin was not flagged on the play, and pointed out he was following his normal routine when he stood at the Pittsburgh 35 following a touchdown that pulled the Steelers within 13-7 midway through the third quarter. He prefers to watch kickoffs on stadium scoreboards because it gives him a better perspective on how the play is developing and couldn't recall a specific time when officials told him to step back.

Still, Tomlin declined to use that as an excuse while communicating with NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and other league officials Monday. Tomlin said he had no plans to fight whatever disciplinary action the league decides to hand out.

"I don't know what a just punishment is," he said. "I have no idea. I'm not acting in a way to preserve my wallet and my money. My wallet and my money is what it is because of the game of football."

The NFL fined the New York Jets $100,000 in 2010 when cameras caught strength and conditioning coach Sal Alosi tripping a Miami player on the sideline. Alosi was suspended by the Jets and eventually resigned after the season.

While Tomlin's job status is certainly not in jeopardy, he is aware critics believe he was attempting to gain a competitive advantage. It's why he felt the need to speak up.

"It's been shocking to me that my actions could have been or have been perceived in any way intentional," he said.

Which is why Tomlin was a little surprised his sons told him the incident kept coming up during the usual Sunday NFL TV coverage.

"When I realized the integrity of the game became the chief issue in the discussion, it was an opportunity and the time was appropriate to set the record straight," he said.

Tomlin acknowledged there was a memo sent out by the league last week asking coaches to be more mindful of where they stand on the sideline. He said he might have missed it because the Steelers were facing the Ravens on a short week.

Regardless, he stressed he will do a better job "policing" himself in the future and stay out of harm's way. He still plans on watching kickoffs on video boards. He just plans to do it from a safer (and legal) vantage point.

As for whether his public expression of remorse could have any effect on whatever fine is coming his way, Tomlin considered it the least of his problems.

"I guess, he said, "we will all make due."

5 former Chiefs sue team over head injuries

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Five former Kansas City Chiefs players who were on the team between 1987 and 1993 filed a lawsuit Tuesday claiming the team hid and even lied about the risks of head injuries during that time period when there was no collective bargaining agreement in place in the NFL.

The lawsuit was filed in Jackson County Circuit Court on behalf of former players Leonard Griffin, Chris Martin, Joe Phillips, Alexander Louis Cooper and Kevin Porter, all of whom played on defense. It seeks more than $15,000 in actual and punitive damages. All five players have opted out of a multimillion-dollar settlement announced this summer that would compensate former players for their head injuries.

The Kansas City plaintiffs claim to be suffering from post-concussion syndrome and latent brain disease because of multiple concussions they sustained while playing for the Chiefs. They all claim also to be suffering from chronic traumatic encephalopathy, which can only be definitively diagnosed by examining the brain after death.

Martin, a Kansas City resident who played linebacker for the Chiefs from 1988 to 1993, said at a news conference he didn't know that continuing to play in games after sustaining a head injury would cause permanent damage.

"I would have liked to have the opportunity to know that going back on the field would cause me to have severe disabilities later in life," he said. "I didn't know that. That's what the lawsuit is about."

Chiefs spokesman Ted Crews and NFL spokesman Greg Aiello both declined to comment on the suit.

Hours after Martin talked about his brain injuries, NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell's wife, Jane, and the wives of former NFL players Howie Long and Mike Golic led a discussion with hundreds of mothers about why they should let their children play football.

As part of the safety clinic at the Chiefs' training facility, roughly 200 women of all ages took part in drills designed to teach them proper tackling techniques. Nearly a dozen former Chiefs, including Hall of Fame linebacker Bobby Bell, walked the giddy moms through the drills.

Roger Goodell and Chiefs owner Clark Hunt also addressed the women, but did not bring up the lawsuit. They were not available to answer questions from the media.

Plaintiffs' attorney Ken McClain called the proposed $765 million settlement between the NFL and former players insignificant and said it provides compensation only to the former players with the most severe brain injuries.

Too early to talk of tax amnesty for Pacquiao

By MICHAEL LIM UBAC
PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER

MANILA, Philippines—The possibility of extending amnesty to world boxing champion Manny Pacquiao for allegedly misdeclaring his income in 2009 is “a bridge that is too far away yet,” President Aquino said on Tuesday. Aquino noted that Pacquiao, the representative of the lone district of Sarangani, had not even owed up to his tax deficiencies. “I think the lesson has to be that if you are guilty of a particular crime, then...you have to exhibit a degree of remorse. But, at this point in time, he says that he has complied with all the requirements. So I think this is crossing the bridge that is too far away yet,” said Aquino, when interviewed at the 27th annual Bulong Pulungan Christmas Party. Aquino explained that any amnesty proposal would emanate from his office and should be approved by Congress. “Amnesty is (a) proposal by me (which) has to normally indicate, perhaps, a class of individuals, a group. It doesn’t refer normally to an individual,” said the President, when asked if he would be open to extending amnesty to Pacquiao. An amnesty does not extinguish a taxpayer’s liabilities as it only condones penalties and does away with imprisonment for tax-evasion cases. On Thursday, Revenue Commissioner Kim Henares said that Pacquiao “technically misdeclared” his income in 2009 when he stated in his tax return that he earned only less than P50 million in the Philippines and when he failed to include his earnings from his two fights in the United States that year. Pacquiao’s gross income should have been closer to or even more than P1 billion, claimed Henares, who froze his bank accounts for allegedly failing to settle P2.2 billion in tax deficiencies. Pacquiao, one of the world’s richest athletes, had just returned from a convincing victory over American Brandon Rios in a welterweight match in Macau when news about his tax problems resurfaced. He protested the Bureau of Internal Revenues (BIR) move to freeze his bank accounts, insisting he had already furnished the bureau copies of tax returns submitted to the US Internal Revenue Service to show that he had paid his income taxes. Pacquiao said he was not hiding or running away from his tax responsibility, and expressed confidence that the issue would be settled soon. The BIR started to investigate and audit Pacquiao in late 2010 after an “abrupt” drop in his ranking among the country’s top taxpayers, said Henares. From 2006 to 2008, Pacquiao was in the top 10 percent of highest taxpayers but he slid to the top 30 percent in 2009. When the BIR audited him for his 2008 and 2009 income tax returns (ITRs), Pacquiao did not submit any documents, thus prompting the agency to subpoena him. He responded by executing an affidavit declaring his US income and tax payment in his 2008 ITR but without any supporting documents. In that instance, Henares said the BIR did not become strict in asking documentation and allowed him to claim tax deductions. But when Pacquiao claimed tax deductions for expenses, he was unable to provide documentation, she said. The BIR then assessed that he had P769 million in tax obligations, including value-added tax. On his 2009 ITR, Henares said Pacquiao did not declare any US income but only less than P50 million earned in the Philippines, thus the “underdeclaration.” The agency estimated his tax obligations for 2009 at P1.433 billion based on his income in the United States from “public information” on his bouts there and shares from pay-per-view and online ticket purchases, as well as endorsements.—With a report by Christine Avendaño

The 195-lb fighter’s last bout, according to Sherdog, was against Robert Palacios during the Gorilla Warfare: Armageddon on Aug. 28, 2010. Taisacan lost on a submission (RNC) at the 1:57 mark of the first round. Meanwhile, 11 other fights will be featured in next week’s Trench Warz 17. The first three bouts will be kickboxing contests with Kyle “300” Martin of Guam Muay Thai taking on Benji Estoque in a 125-lb duel, Jonathan “Outlaw” Camacho of Team D2S meeting Lenny “Machine Gun” Sablan at 135 lbs, and Jones Langu challenging Trench Tech’s Jasper “The Disaster” Van Der Maas at 145 lbs. wise and with Alipio still complaining, the Laguna big man was called for the infraction and Armatech’s Sonny Ebuén canned both charities for their 86-80 advantage, with still three minutes left in the match. Armatech went on to hit 12 more free throws in the remaining minutes of the fourth quarter, as Laguna completely lost it, committing one foul after another. Laguna reached its boiling point at the 1:13 mark of the fourth when coach Jerry “Mutombo” Lopez entered the playing court and uttered heated words with the referee. The Laguna mentor was slapped with a technical foul and led some of his players in walking out of the game. The rest of the Laguna players—Zapata, Jun Tabora, Darag, Erlan Lansang, Nikko Buhay, and the fouled out Rodney Catalla showed sportsmanship and finished the match. Catalla was called for his fifth and last foul late in the third, forcing Laguna to rely on Alipio, Villarin, and Tabora. Tabora scored the only two field goals for Laguna in the last four-minute meltdown and although he finished with 21 points, he had to bleed for his baskets, as Yosh Gabaldon hounded him all night. Villarin top-scored for Laguna with his 26 points despite reporting for duty beginning in the second quarter, but missed his last four attempts in the closing minutes after starting the fourth with 6 straight points, while Alipio was scoreless in the final canto. Armatech had a balance offense with Ebuén leading the defending champion with his 22 markers. Moreno chipped in 19, Bernard Montano had 14, Gabaldon contributed 13, and Pineda added 10. Bruce Berline and Bong Malasarte combined for 15 markers. Meanwhile, in the first semis game, Degree also lost focus in the fourth quarter, allowing Blue Haus to cruise to victory. Degree came back from a 32-47 halftime deficit and managed to move within single digit at the end of the third, 56-65, when it made lapses in the opening minutes of the fourth, helping Blue Haus to widen the gap anew. Blue Haus started the fourth with a triple from Edgar Pangelinan for a 68-56 lead and the advantage ballooned to 16, after the pennant champion gained four straight free throws in the ensuing plays. The charities were awarded after Degree was charged for an unsportsmanlike foul with Dindo Pablo holding Edsel Mendoza, who stole the ball and headed for a breakaway, and Ed Cosino getting a technical for contesting the call. Degree never recovered from thereon, while Blue Haus continued to play unselfish basketball en route to the 19-point win. Rebuyon paced Blue Haus with 18 points, while Mendoza and Pangelinan chipped in 17 apiece, and Tony Diaz had 16. The Blue Haus-Armatech title game is set for 5pm, followed by the Open division championship match between KB Market and Hoopaholics at 7pm.

Armatech sets title duel vs Blue Haus

By ROSELYN B. MONROYO

Defending champion Armatech/MDX is back in the finals and will be battling unbeaten Blue Haus in the title game in the 2013 UFO-Budweiser Masters Division Basketball League this Saturday night at the Gillette Multipurpose Gymnasium.

Armatech and Blue Haus arranged their winner-take-all finale this weekend after downing separate semis foes last Tuesday night. Blue Haus took the first finals berth and stretched its winning run this season to 11 after a 97-78 rout of D&Q Degree, while Armatech secured the second and last finals ticket after eliminating Laguna/Erika's Catering in the other semis pairing, 98-80.

Third-ranked Armatech may have won by 18 points, but it once clung to a shaky 2-point cushion before Laguna lost focus in the last four minutes of the match, concentrating more on contesting calls instead of keeping its foe within striking distance.

Laguna had a chance to either tie the game or grab the lead when it had possession at the 82-80 tally, but Amor Zapanta's entry pass to Melvin Villarín was intercepted by Elmer Pineda, who then went coast-to-coast for a layup to give Armatech more breathing room.

Another botched play from Laguna returned the ball to Armatech, which got another break when Jun Alipio was called for a technical foul for excessive complaining. Alipio contested that Armatech's Martin Moreno touched the ball last in a battle for the loose ball at the right corner against Laguna's Rey Darag. The referee saw other-
